DAD JOKE OF THE WEEK

I can't believe someone broke into my house and stole all my fruit.

I am peachless.

Quote for the week

"When you stop chasing the wrong things, you give the right things a chance to catch you."

GOOD NEWS STORIES

A SAFE HAVEN FOR RESCUED ANIMALS

Morocco | As a child in Tangier in the late 1970s, Salima Kadaoui made it her personal mission to save strays from animal control. At eight years old, she volunteered at an animal charity and saw firsthand how the city's lack of vaccination, neutering and spaying programs only exacerbated the challenging situation. "I would go home and cry and say this is unacceptable," she says. "I promised myself that I would change my country and that promise stayed with me."

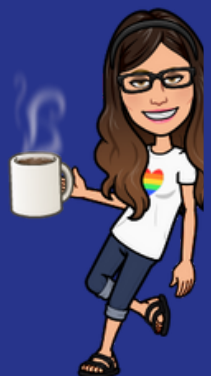

In 2012, after raising her family in the United Kingdom, she returned to Morocco to care for an ailing parent. She also made good on her childhood vow, founding the Sanctuaire de la faune de Tanger. Located just outside Tangier, it's currently home to more than 450 dogs, 100 cats, 48 donkeys, two wild boars, an ape, two storks and a mule, among other small creatures. The sanctuary, which receives its funding from donations, is run by 14 employees, half of whom were once homeless and now live on site. They collect stray animals, get them neutered and vaccinated, and bring them back to the sanctuary. Caring for dogs takes up much of their time. There are an estimated three million stray dogs in Morocco today. In Kadaoui's assessment, poverty and cultural beliefs often set the country's stray animals and residents against one another. To date, she and her team have treated, neutered and vaccinated more than 3,000 dogs.

During the pandemic, they also delivered food and essentials to both the city's homeless population and its starving strays. Kadaoui believes her work has ultimately helped people feel more sympathy for animals. "It connected their plights," she says. "And now more people care." —By Flannery Dean

God of Justice, our human dignity and dignity of work is constantly being threatened by the accumulation of wealth by the few while many struggle to make ends meet. Change our hearts and ignite our imaginations to see another way of doing things, that the way to peace is through solidarity.
Guide our feet on the way to peace.
Amen.
